Thinking Out Loud

H. M. L. Jr.

You know the statement—"one can't see the forest for the trees,' a crystallization in words of the old thought that large things are best appreciated from some distance. From far away, they can be seen in proper perspective, and more accurately evaluated.

Sometimes, too, the intriguing and beautiful things about us, if we see them every day, become so familiar that they cease to create any pleasure, though strangers may stop, enjoy the surroundings, and wonder at the inhabitants indifference. These thoughts are not new, but perhaps a keener appreciation of its naturally interesting and pleasant aspects.

Take Nevada City for instance: surely it is a fascinating example to use. Here natural beauty of landscape combines with the piquant quaintness left by a colorful history to produce a unique effect. Nevada City—called Nevada before the state, because of the snow of occasional hard winters—grew on the banks of Deer Creek, from the almost anonymous settlement known as Caldwell's Upper Store to a rough and roistering gold center. Almost overnight the city of frame shanties and dirty tents mush-roomed to a gold hungry metropolis of 20,000.

Once Nevada City was considered as a site for the capitol of California! Political campaigners of those days never overlooked this potent and populous boom-town; many and many are the tales told of bibulous campaigns garnished with the full old-time paraphernalia or torchlight parades, marching songs and elections bought by grog.

In bygone days practically every second building in Nevada City was a combined saloon and gambling house. Rough gold, made fast, was spent fast too, and the pleasure emporiums that lined the streets of the old town scrupled not to gut the pockets of none-too-careful argonauts. Once the famous Madame Moustache, only successful woman gambler, held sway in a glittering chance palace here.

And here it was, too, that the famous assay that started the Comstock Lode rush was made—at the Ott assay office, still standing much as it was then on Main Street at the foot of Commercial. Here Bill Stewart, pioneer lawyer, began his career—first prospector, then lawyer—and then tycoon of the first degree with a magnificent fortune torn from the endless litigation that marred the development of Comstock's fabulous lode. The house that Stewart built here still stands on Piety Hill, made distinctive by its row of Southern style colonial pillars — Stewart's tribute to his bride from Dixieland.

Once, near what is now the high school, Stewart was coming into town for supplies, during his prospecting days. He was a huge man, and the addition of two long Navy colts to his wardrobe made him indeed fearsome. He noted a crowd of angry miners dragging a fine looking young man along behind them, naked to the waste, with his hands bound behind him. When he stopped to enquire what their grudge against the young fellow was, he was told that the apparently doomed man had stolen fifty gold pieces from his roomy, and was about to be lynched for the theft.

As they took the victim up on a half-completed building, and prepared to make him do the floorless dance from a crosspiece, Stewart took charge of the angy mob. He was domineering, and with the Navy pistols in his hands, made the crowd promptly obey his demand that they try their prisoner before passing sentence. Then and there, William Stewart conducted his first criminal trial, and forced the mob to accede to his decision of "innocent"—and then he turned up the guilty culprit, who had been the chief accuser!

Unique Plan Devised To Boost Apple Industry

A unique plan to boost the apple industry of Nevada County has been inaugurated by County Agicultural Commissioner L. G. Lageson.

In cooperation with the American Railway Express, Lageson and the Bursill Brothers, Rough and Ready apple growers, are packing boxes of Stark King Delicious, Ben Davis, Winesap and Rome Beauty apples in Christmas boxes for shipment throughout the country.

The apples have been in cold storage since they were picked. Agricultural Commissioner Lageson said he will attempt to persuade all growers in the county to cold storage their apples and sell them at Christmas in order to obtain a much better price for their product.

Lageson said it is possible 200 gift boxes of the fruit will be sent out this year.

Boxes of the fruit are on display in Colley's and at the court house here and at various business houses in Grass Valley.

LEAGUE VOTING ON OFFICERS

Members of the Nevada County Mine Workers Protective League are balloting today on new officers. The polls will close at 7 o'clock tonight.

President Olney Donnelly is not a candidate for reelection. Donnelly has served as head of the independent labor union for the past four years and is not running for the position this year because of ill health.

The voting today is taking place in the league's headquarters above the Strand Theatre in Grass Valley. G. J. Hoskins and Stanley Verran are candidates for president.

BOY SCOUTS TO SELL TREES

Continuing a practice of years, the Nevada City Boy Scout Troop 24 and 6 this year will again sell Christmas trees to the public.

The trees will be for sale in the lot behind the city hall. The scout officials announce some beautiful trees have been secured and urge local residents to pick theirs out early.

T. E. Smart, assisted by Phil Paynter, will operate the Shell Station at Commercial and Nevada Street for the Shell Oil Company.

NEARLY 500 CHRISTMAS TREES CONFISCATED CUTTER FINED $150 BY LOYALTON JUDGE

W. P. Harmann of Sunnyvale, was cited to appear before Judge Schroeder of Loyalton, for illegal cutting of Christmas trees from national forest land near Loyalton. Hermann appeared before Judge Schroeder on December 2 and was fined $150 for cutting 459 trees. The arresting officers were District Ranger F. A. Land of the Sierraville Ranger District and E. M. Stone of Nevada City.

Also cited was Cesare Belli of Loyalton, owner of private land adjoining forest service property for failure to deliver a proper bill of sale for Christmas trees sold to Harmann, to the property authorities as required by law. Belli was fined $25 of which $22.50 was suspended.

In assessing these fines, Judge Schroeder was enforcing the state law which places the responsibility on the buyer to stay within the boundaries of the land from which the purchase was made and to Section 384a of the natural resources code which places responsibility on the land owner to give a properly executed clearance in the form of a notarized bill of sale.

Forest service officials pointed out also that no sale of trees can be made from unpatented mining claims.

Song Composers Like Oregon Creek Camp

The Oregon Creek Campground in the Camptonville District of the Tahoe National Forest has turned musical, according to District Ranger Frank W. Meggers of the Camptonville Ranger District. Eugene Gregory Lally, whose latest song is "We Will Lead the Way" has visited Oregon Creek three times this year. He returns there for quiet, peace and inspiration.

Previous to the more renowned Lally, an elderly prospector, Mr. Woodcock, spent his evenings with his accordian music and later composed a piece he calls "Sierra County." Now he is working on one called "Yuba County". He has lived in both counties and tried to be loyal to both.

Ranger Meggers is unable to figure out whether it is singing waters of the creek or swaying of the tall pines that moves these composers to be musically inspired.

Agricultural College Presents Blanket To Elton B. Tobiassen

The proudest Nevada Cityan yesterday was no doubt Elton (Bub) Tobiassen, former California Agricultural College at Davis student and now employed at the Lava Cap Mine.

Bub received in the mail yesterday a beautiful blanket with a picture of a Mustang on it and the titles he won while a member of the college's boxing team.

Bub was a national champion, beside Pacific Coast champion for two years straight and the gift was in appreciation of the glory he brought to his school.

Sheriff and Mrs. Carl Tobiassen, Bub's parents, were also proud of the blanket. The Nugget hopes to obtain the blanket for a short time to display in its windows. There is no doubt the residents of Nevada City desire to see the blanket.

Meeting Will Be Held Tonight To Further Christmas Fete Plans

COMMITTEE SAYS UP TO INDIVIDUAL MERCHANT ON REMANING OPEN UNTIL 9 O'CLOCK

Further plans for pre-Christmas celebrations in Nevada City will be formulated tonight by the Chamber of Commerce. The chamber's Christmas committee will meet with the city council prior to holding a session in th organization's headquarters on the second floor of the city hall.

The chamber plans to ask the council for a contribution for the Christmas celebration.

At a meeting earlier this week the chamber decided to secure about 250 trees for the decorating of the city streets. At tonight's meeting, definite plans for the locating and the cutting of the trees will be formed.

It was also decided at the meeting earlier this week to leave to each individual merchant whether or not he desired to remain open evenings until Christmas after the 10th. The matter of decorating stores will also be left to the individual businessmen.

It is the general belief most of the merchants will keep their stores open during the two weeks before Christmas.

The committee decided to have the Christmas carols broadcast from a sound truck each evening during the two weeks before Christmas. Other entertainment events are being arranged.

The big party for the children of the city is planned for December 23. Santa Claus will arrive in town to distribute candy and other delicacies to the kiddies.

Local merchants are anticipating a good Christmas business. Many residents, apparently heeding the sound advice to shop early, have already started their Christmas shopping. Civic leaders are urging Christmas shoppers to buy at home. Local merchants have a fine gift selection and the prices are no higher than elsewhere.

RAIL STRIKE AVERTED

The confidence which the public has had for many decades in the pariotism, good faith and fundamental soundness of labor relations in the nation's railway systems has been well justified by the amicable settlement of the nationwide wage dispute which had threatened to culminate in a strike beginning December 7.

That this strike would never take place was a foregone conclusion from the very beginning and the management of the major railroad lines have demonstrated their reasonableness on so many occasions that a parlyzing strike during this critical emergency was utterly unthinkable.

The settlement arrived at through long and painstaking negotiations conducted by the president's fact-finding board, furthermore, appears to be one that will leave no ill-feeling on either side, although each may feel somewhat disappointed that it did not get more.

It provides daily wage increases of 76 cents for the five operating brotherhoods, and 80 cents for the 14 non-operating organizations. The increases are to be on a permanent basis, rather than just temporary as was provided in the first report of the fact-finding board.

The fact that both the brotherhoods and the management have had the good sense to arrive at a compromise agreement is further proof that railway labor relations has "come of age" to a greater degree, perhaps, than the relations between any other large groups of labor and industry—not only with respect to the remarkably successful machinery that has been set up to settle disputes. but also in the reasonable, conciliatory attitude that both sides have adopted.

The prompt settlement of this railway wage dispute, before it developed into a strike is in sharp contrast to the outrageous coal mine strike which John L. Lewis called, and lated called off.

The difference. principally, is that the leaders of the railway brotherhoods do not regard themselves as exponents of one side in an uncompromising class warfare, and they are interested in the nation's welfare first, the welfare of their unions second, and personal aggrandisement and power only incidentally, if at all.

EVEN GOEBBELS SCARED

The tone of the German press has undergone a curious change. For instance, in a recent article propaganda director Goebbels seems actually pessimistic as to Germany's chances. He didn't say that in clear word, of course, but the intimation was that the reich had a mighty tough job on her hands and that victory was far away.

It is generally believed in military quarters that the blitz technique has finally failed. It worked with France, Poland, the Low Countries and elsewhere. But it didn't work with England. And it isn't working with Russia.

The war is becoming more or less stabilized. It is turning into a war of resources. Hitler's prime concern now is to organize German controlled Europe into the vast producing machine that the Nazi armies need. And the democracies' prime concern is to out produce him in all fields.

Mr. Churchill's recent statement to the effect that the British air force is at last equal to Germany's is not regarded as braggadocio by those who have access to the facts. England has done wonders in building up air power, and American aid is substantial and increasing. The democracies are gaining ground now—but they have a long way to go still. Hitler's land forces are still the best equipped and best trained on earth.

Nevada Irrigation District Defendant In Suit Filed By Federal Land Bank

A test case to determine whether the Nevada Irrigation District can refuse to deliver water to the Federal Land Bank because water bills were left unpaid by the previous owners of the property has been filed by the financial institution in the superior court of Placer County.

The bank asks that it be permitted to purchase water without paying a bill of $1,035 which previous owners had failed to meet.

The irrigation district has refused to deliver or sell water to the bank for use on the land until the earlier bill is paid.

INCREASED DEFENSE GROUP

The personnel of the Nevada County Civilian Defense Council was increased with the appointment of E. K. Smart, Guerdon Ellis, R. R. Goyne and F. W. Gaiennie by the Nevada County Boaard of Supervisors.

The appointment of the men was made by the supervisors at their December meeting, which concluded Tuesday.

Jobs Are Found For Discharged Soldiers

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 3.—California's local selective service boards and their reemployment chairmen and committeemen are cited by National Selective Service Headquarters for "efficiency and zeal" in finding jobs for the state's discharged soldiers.

This was announced recently by Brig. Gen. Joseph O. Donovan, state director of selective service, following receipt of a communication from Washington in which Brig. Gen. L B. Hershey, national director of selective service, praised local boards for having "restored hundreds of returning selectees, National Guardsmen and other California ex-service men to their former civilian jobs or providing new employment without a serious hitch in any specific case."

Approximately 61,500 of the approximate 200,000 members of the nation's armed forces, relieved from active duty between September 1 and October 15, have in the greater majority of cases been "quickly placed in civilian employment," the national headquarters communication stated.

It was further stated that local boards throughout the country were instrumental, between July 1 and September 1, in obtaining jobs for approximately 150,000 other members of the armed forces whose term of enlistment expired in that period.

Commenting on the handling of these reemployment cases by State Headquarters and local boards, Gen. Hershey said:

"Credit for this important accomplishment for the national welfare is due particularly to the initiative of our state directors and the voluntary teamwork of local boards and their reemployment committeemen. In this respect, the work of the members of the Selective Service System in the State of California has been typical of the entire nation. Local board members are proving to be just as zealous in finding jobs for men returning from the nation's armed forces as the were in recruiting for the army.

"The handling of these thousands of reemployment cases with virtually no complaint is a splendid commentary on the efficiency and zeal of the members of the Selective Service System, and an encouraging promise for the success of the entire re-employment program."

General Donovan pointed out that selective service has the task of obtaining civilian employment for all men released by the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, including enlisted men as well as selectees. Men are instructed to contact re-employment committemen of their local boards as soon as they retrun home, General Donovan said, adding that reemployment committeemen receive well in advance of the return of each man complete data from National Selective Service Headquarters on the man's civilian occupation, skill, experience and military record. This assures fast action in job placement.

In cases where the ex-service man had a job before entering service, the re-employment committeeman of his local board takes up his case with his former employer, seeking reinstatement in accordance with provisions of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940. If the man was unemployed at the time of entering military service, his case is referred to a reemployment committeeman or to the State Employment Office. The latter is done to facilitate cooperation of employers who are urged to list their employment needs with their state employment office and to express preference for ex-service men.

Only Two in 100 Make Full Stop

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3. — Only two motorists in 100 come to a full halt at a highway stop sign. The majority coast slowly past it at from 3 to 6 miles per hour or more.

These are the conclusions of Dr. Franklin Fearing, professor of psychology on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California, and one of his graduate students. E. M. Krise. Their findings are reported in the current Journal of Social Psychology.

The experiment was conducted in Santa Monica where the California Incline joins the Roosevelt Highway. Observations were made of 1541 motorists.

It was found that only 2.1 per cent came to a full stop, 3 per cent stopped beyond the line. 11.5 per cent slowed down to 1-3 miles per hour, 45.1 per cent slowed to 3-6 miles per hour, 35 per cent slowed to 6 plus miles per hour, and 3.2 per cent didn't stop at all.

"When our data was examined with regard to sex of driver and the type of vehicle, truck, sedan or roadster—no significant differences in percentages were found," said Dr. Fearing.

"John Doe" Lives Better Than King

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 4.—Due in no small part to advertising, John Doe, the average American of 1941, lives better than a king of only 100 years ago.

So says Dr. Frederic P. Woellner, professor of education on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California.

He points out that advertising men are the link between the producer and consumer. Without the services of advertising to extoll and push the products of American inventive genius, they would not have been made available to the general public.

"There is a constantly circulated superstition," says Dr. Woellner, "that money spent on advertising soda crackers for example, should be devoted to putting more crackers into the box. It is asked: are not two more crackers per box more convincing than a radio blast, a billboard or a magazine advertisement?

"But the advertising man knows that his well told story has so multiplied the demand, which has so increased the production, which has so lowered the cost of production, which has so lowered the price that the consumer gets not two extra crackers—but four!

Dr. Woellner points out that it is the job of advertising men to sell themselves as well as their products. He said they must make the public realize what they have contributed to the high standard of living in America.

Postmaster Advises Of Regulations Concerning Christmas Cards, Parcels

Postmaster Betty Martin West today advised the public of the fact that the Post Office Department is forced to destroy thousands of Christmas cards each year due to undeliverable cards which have been prepaid with the 1½ cent rate of postage. It is suggested that patrons use first class postage on Christmas cards, 2 cents an ounce for local delivery, 2 cents an ounce for Rural Route and Star Route. Way delivery and 3 cents per ounce for out of city delivery. Cards bearing the 1½ cent rate of postage cannot be forwarded nor can they be returned to writer.

"Shop NOW for Christmas. Mail early. Wrap parcels securely and insure. Place name and return address of sender in the upper left hand corner of all mail matter. Special delivery postage assures immediate attention upon arrival at destination. Letters containing currency should be registered. Attention to these suggestions will protect and expedite delivery of your mail matter."

Names Of Selective Service Delinquents Are Announced

In a letter addressed to James Tyrrell, chairman of Selective Service Board No. 22, the state director requested that a list of registrants failing to comply with the requirements of the Selective Training and Service Act be made available to the press for publication. Chairman Tyrrell today said:

It has been established that a large majority of so called delinquents are attributable not to a willful intent to escape selective service, but rather to neglect or ignorance of regulations. While the Selective Training and Service Act is adequately equipped with penalties for those would willfully fail to comply with the act, it is not the intent or purpose of Selective ervice to prosecute until all routine channels for clearing a delinquency have been exhausted."

The request for publishing delinquent lists constitute a virtual right about face in Selective Service procedure. Heretofore delinquent lists have been turned over to United States attorneys and the FBI after a reasonable time has elapsed, after the date set for the registrant's reporting. The present publication plan based on the theory of negligence, will precede the more drastic action of investigation and prosecution.

Persons acquainted with a delinquent registrant and possessing a knowledge of his whereabouts are asked to communicate with the delinquent's local Selective Service Board.

Chairman Tyrrell said the following registrants are delinquent with his local board:

Jose Ma. Pinuelas, Boca, Nevada County, California. William Saa, 1961 Atlantic St., Oakland, California. Herbert Gorham, care General Delivery, San Francisco California. Wm. Geo. Woods, 439 Neal Street, Grass Valley, California. Charles Manners, care Rainbow Tavern, Soda Springs, California. Robert Norman Latin, 118 Bush Street, Grass Valley, California. Wallace Elmer Aamme, R. D. No. 1, Box 87-A, Nevada City, California. Cecil Ingram, Soda Springs, Nevada County, California. Jesse Thomas Jones, Sierra Tavern Hotel, Truckee, California. James Edward Flippen, General Delivery, Grass Valley, California. Frank Howard Forbes, 205 Jones St., Aut. 314, San Francisco, California. Leo Justice, care General Delivery, Fallon, Nevada.

334 Young Men Pass State Bar Examination

The Committee of State Bar Examiners today announced that 334 young Californians had successfully passed this year's examinations and will be recommended for admission to the bar.

The committee will move their admission at sessions of the California Supreme Court on December 16 in San Francisco, and on January 9 in Los Angeles, according to Leon E. Warmke, secretary of the committee.

For many of these young men and women admission to the bar is the result of several years work in California colleges and law schools which have cooperated with the State Bar in raising the educational standards of the profession.

At the request of the State Bar, a ruling was secured permitting draft boards to defer military service until the applicants had taken their bar examination in October, Philip Angell, president, stated. Some have already been inducted into the military service and will not commenc their practice until their term of service is over.

MOVIE STAR JOINS U.S. NAVY

Ensign Wayne Morris Seeks Wings

Wayne Morris, recent star of "I Wanted Wings," became a member of Uncle Sam's Navy in May, 1941, when he was appointed to the rank of Ensign.

When asked what he thought of the United States Navy, Morris said, "I think every man who is considering joining a military service should look into the 'chance of a lifetime' which the Navy and Naval Reserve offer to get into the big-pay field of the future—aviation. In the Navy you can attend the finest flight training schools in the world, and receive instruction from Navy pilots who introduced dive bombing, aircraft carriers and catapult take-offs to the rest of the world. Also, there are opportunities in Naval Aviation for men who don't want to fly. They can be trained as aviation machinists, metalsmiths, photographers, observers, or they can receive instruction in many other trades. It's a great life in the Navy."

Men carried guns in those days. Horse thieves were discouraged by a high mortality rate among their ranks, though few died natural deaths. Even amusements were often rough and tough. Bull and bear fights were sometimes tried, though it is doubtful if a bull and bear with the desire to fight one another have ever been put in the same ring, or whether even when a few half hearted efforts at belligerence are made, there is ever an even enough match to provide a real show.

The old Nevada Theatre drew famous stage stars who braved the hardships of traveling and the uncertainty of the rewards in the rough and ready mining communities. Edwin Booth once played here, and a host of other celebrities of the day. Nevada City's theatre burned more than once, as did the rest of the tinder-like town of frame structures. But always the pioneers brought to work their overflowing energy, and the city was rebuilt.

The old buildings were quaint and picturesque, and though not many are left now, the pine-covered hills on which they stand form a frame and backdrop that gives the picture much of its old time color. Each location has its own particular romance. There is Town Talk, so named (according to the story) because the post office for both Grass Valley and Nevada City was once located there and the place became the gossip center of the communities. And there is Sugar Loaf, tree covered, loaf like mound, and the seven hills upon which the town is built, seven hills with seven individual stories.

Nevada City, in short, has a truly characteristic charm. Its history was spectacular and glittering, sparked with the feverish light of gold dust. Now the city has settled into the comparative serenity of a busy mining community, set in a picture-like background of foothills that seem somehow a most suitable background. Perhaps because the foothills have changed so little since the early, golden days, they seem to add much to the colorful and quaint character of the hilly little city.

So now and then whet your appreciation of the town, by appreciating its natural attractiveness, and by calling to mind the picturesque stories that are behind the location and buildings that we see every day. Let us remember that Nevada City, for these reasons—for its roistering, romantic history—its delightful natural surroundings, offers as much to the traveler as any locality in the Sierras. Too few tourists realize the attractions that lie in store for them here. Perhaps advertising the town and its attractive color in a judicious manner through mediums that would reach the traveling public would enlarge lucrative travel to this romantic part of the Sierra Nevadas.

By appreciating the town more thoroughly, it will be possible to find ways to increase and make stable its prosperity through attracting others to its charms!

WAGES AND PRICES

There is a growing feeling in congress that some form of wage control must accompany price control.

Two wage control proposals have so far been made. One would impose a definite ceiling on wages, as of a given date, and would impose the same kind of a ceiling on prices at the same time. The other proposal is more elastic, and would give the Price Administration authority to control wages when it believed that further increases would be of an inflationary character.

There is obviously room for disagreement as to the details of wage control legislation. There is, however, no ground for believing that anything resembling workable price control can be effected if wages are permitted to soar without restraint. The price trend today is to a large extent the result of the many wage increases. The cost of both farm and industrial labor is reaching near-record peaks—and this is directly reflected in the wholesale price index. Retail distribution, led by the chains, has been doing a splendid work in absorbing as much of the price increase as possible, and in holding retail price boosts to the minimum. But the mechandisers can't do the impossible, and today retail prices are necessarily going up.

Secretary Morgenthau has warned the country of the imminent danger of real inflation. The country's industries, in both th producing and the distributing fields, are doing all they can to hold down prices. But so long as wages and all other costs move uncontrolled to higher levels, these efforts cannot achieve full success. If industry is forced to accept rigorous price control which will greatly limit freedom of action, labor must expect the same thing.

TIME TO REMIND PUBLIC SERVANTS OF THEIR DUTY

By RALPH H. TAYLOR

It is an ancient and time-honored custom in this land of ours for public officials — on national holidays and during times of stress—to give patriotic addresses, exhorting the people to re-dedicate themselves to America and to prove equal to their great heritage by a higher degree of good citizenship.

We have no quarrel with that custom; the American people need to take time out at frequent intervals to reconsecrate themselves to America—and certainly, in a democracy good citizenship is the cornerstone of good government.

But under present conditions, we are of the opinion that the custom might well be reversed for once. It is time that the American people spoke to American office holders and exhorted them to give a little more of unselfish, unswerving devotion to the people whose destinies they control, and to the nation whose trust they hold.

Lest we be misunderstood, this writer does not question the fundamental patriotism of most public officials; they are probably just as patriotic as the voters who elected them. But many of them, we believe, have lost sight of the fact that extravagant spending of public funds on unneeded governmental frills and follies ceases to be "just politics" during a national emergency, and can only be classed as disloyalty to their country and the people who comprise it. Many such public officials, who would gladly shoulder a rifle to hold off an invader, would buck like a Missouri mule if asked to cut their departmental overhead so that funds could be made available, in greater measure, to arm this country against such invasion. Many of them, we believe, just haven't stopped to define patriotism, as the term applies to government officers.

There can be no escape from national defense taxes — and no real American, who places a proper valuation on his American birthright—will seek to evade taxes which are imposed to safeguard his nation's security. But the mere fact that such tremendous demands must be made on the people for national defense should make any reasonable honest, patriotic public official think twice before spending public funds for the non-essentials; certainly it should make him ashamed to dole out the funds entrusted to him for political patronage.

Several recent developments in the news are responsible for this unrequested "speech to public officials."

First, we noted an announcement by the California Taxpayers Association that local government expenditures throughout the state increased 42 per cent in the five years between 1934-35 and 1939-40. Coupled with this was a report that state expenditures during the same period went up 34 per cent, jumping from $166,000,000 to $223,000,000. And in addition to these increases, of course there was a record breaking jump in federal expenditures for non defense purposes.

Second, we noted a report by the Assembly Interim Committee on governmental efficiency and economy recommending that in view of soaring state revenues, which are greatly exceeding normal needs Governor Olson should call a special session of the state legislature to reduce state taxes. This report pointed out that the state deficit will be liquidated by the middle of next year and that the present state tax burden is "unnecessarily in excess of the state's actual requirements while at the same time taxpayers throughout the state will be facing the burden of paying out huge additional amounts for necessary federal tax purposes."

It is conservatively estimated that national defense taxes next year will take at least 24 cents out of every dollar earned by American citizens. And it is considered quite probable that defense tax demands may greatly exceed this amount. In Great Britain, 50 per cent of the nation's income is going into armament costs, in Germany, 6 per cent.

In light of such conditions; in view of the great sacrifices which are to be asked of citizens in every walk of life—isn't it time for every public official in California, from Governor Olson down to the lowliest township officer, to re-examine his books and his patriotism? Isn't it time for the people to speak to their chosen representatives and say: "We are sacrificing; we expect you to do likewise—and if you don't, we shall put you down as having failed in your public trust and your loyalty to America?" We think it is!

ALBINO QUAIL FOUND

ANGELES CAMP, Dec. 3.—(UP)—The first two albino quail ever killed in Calaveras county fell before a hunters gun here. The birds, a male and a female, were lighter in color than a dove, although each had faint speckled feathers on its breast. The male had three top-knots, an oddity, according to local nimrods. The birds were sent to a taxidermist for mounting.

Girl's Nerve Puts Mountain Lion To Rout When He Invades Camp

Mary Van Kirk

AWAKENED in the night by sounds of padding feet circling the place where she camped, a wild and isolated spot on the banks of the Colorado River, a young Wyoming girl has demonstrated her nerve by putting to rout a full-grown mountain lion.

The girl is Mary Van Kirk, of Pinedale, Wyoming. She was in a party that had gone down to Southern Nevada for some fishing in the desolate country fifty miles below Boulder City. They made camp in a drizzling rain. Miss Van Kirk rolled up in her blanket with only a strip of tarpaulin above her.

"Some time later I awoke sure that something was close by," Miss Van Kirk said. "Then I heard padding footfalls. They came quite near, then retreated. Soon I heard them again, this time from another direction. Then the sounds, much closer, went completely around me.

"The footfalls were so distinct that I knew the animal, whatever it was, was large. Then the sounds stopped very near me. I thought of trying to reach my gun, but by that time I didn't dare move. I had to take another kind of chance.

"I worked my flashlight from under the bedroll. The light had been fitted with fresh batteries and the moment I touched the switch the beam launched out into the drizzle and shot — smack—into the eyes of a mountain lion. The beast looked huge as he crouched, as if ready to spring.

"But he didn't move. He stared straight into the light. Then he blinked, shifting his head a little. Suddenly he was up, backing away so fast that he bumped against a rock. Then, in one leap, he went straight up over the rock and out of sight. I heard some stones rattling, but nothing more."

Miss Van Kirk said the lion looked six or seven feet long. Other members of the party confirmed this guess from the size of the animal's footprints.

THE NAZI'S CREED

"Nazi, what do you think," I asked.
"Of the part you are asked to play?"
But the Nazi answered, "I do not think;
I do not think, I obey."

"Do you think you should shoot a patriot down,
Or help a tyrant slay."
But the Nazi answered, "I do not think;
I do not think, I obey."

"Do you think your conscience was made to die,
And your brain to rot away."
But the Nazi answered, "I do not think;

STATE—

California incmes will total more than seven billion dollars this year the state chamber o commerce estimated yesterday.

That will mark a new high in this state's history. It will average around $1,000 per person for the approximately seven million population.

The chamber's research department figured the income would run 20 to 25 per cent higher than last year's $5,680,000,000 as estimated by the federal department of commerce.

Value of products from farms, the mines, forests, fisheries and factories was calculated at $3,500,000,000. That was up a billion dollars from the 1940 total for basic industries. Incidentally, it was also a billion higher than 1929.

The 40 per cent increase in value of these products compared with an estimated 62 per cent rise in the state's factory wage payments.

Incidentally, the total paid out in wages ran just about double that of two years ago.

The cost of living went up, too, but not as fast as industrial wages. Average weekly earnings of individual workers—as distinguished from total wage payments — rose about 29 per cent while the cost of living went up around 9 per cent.

Some food items soared spectacularly, but other relatively steady items held the average cost of living down to a 16 per cent increase.

Sending kept fairly well up to the rise of incomes. Dollar value of department store sales ran some 17 per cent higher than last year.
